SWJ History

Stuart W. Johnson & Co., Inc. has been a distributor of equipment, production supplies and services for dairies, cheese plants, breweries and food processors throughout the upper midwest for over 60 years. Stuart W. Johnson founded the company in 1948, filling a need for a more localized supplier in Southeastern Wisconsin. Stu, as he was known by all, served as president of the firm until his retirement.

In 1970, SWJ was purchased and is still held today by the Robert Morava family. The organization has grown along with the customers it has served, and it currently employs 19 people in its Lake Geneva, WI facility. The company has thrived because of the level of service and attention to detail that it provides to multiple thriving industries, and above all, it values the customer relationships and the success it has partnered in for well over 60 years.
